

Ideal keyboard for special needs

Great keyboard for pupils with dyslexia or dyspraxia

I saw Inclusive Technology's Jumbo XL keyboard at the nasen Live 2010 show at the Reebok stadium last week. It's not a new product and I have no idea how I have missed it up till now.

It is brilliant! It has big chunky keys and has everything except numbers. The function keys are in a different colour from the punctuation marks and the vowels are a different colour from consonants. So now when we tell kids with dyslexia that every syllable or 'beat' in a word has to have a vowel or the letter y, they have a good chance of finding them.

It costs £49 + VAT and you can choose an uppercase or lowercase keyboard and it even has 2 USB ports so you can attach a mouse or track ball or a memory stick
